DEFINITY® AUDIX® System
Announcement Customization

Contents

About This Document

This document describes how to customize system announcements in the AT&T DEFINITY® AUDIX™ System R1.0. It covers customization strategies and provides three appendixes to allow the DEFINITY AUDIX system administrators to see all of the announcements and fragments in the standard announcement set.

Its focus is on how to perform customization tasks. Use this document with its companion reference, DEFINITY AUDIX R1.0 Forms Reference (585-300-207), which contains detailed information about each administration form that is used to perform DEFINITY AUDIX announcement customization.

INTENDED AUDIENCES

This document is intended for the person(s) who administers the DEFINITY AUDIX system and wishes to customize system announcements for his/her company application.

PREREQUISITE SKILLS OR KNOWLEDGE

This document does not assume prerequisite skills or knowledge. However, training for DEFINITY AUDIX administration is available and is strongly recommended.

HOW THIS DOCUMENT IS ORGANIZED

- Chapter 1, Overview, provides an overview of announcements fragments and the standard announcement set and how they are used m the DEFINITY AUDIX system.

- Chapter 2, Announcement Customization Scenarios, describes the major tasks involved in customizing system announcements and fragments.

- Chapter 3, Variables in Announcements, describes the variables encountered in system announcements and how they are used.

- Appendix A, Standard Announcements, is an exhaustive list of all the standard announcements and the fragments (both fragment numbers and text) that compose them.

- Appendix B, Standardized Fragments, is an exhaustive list of all the fragments in the standard announcement set. The listing includes both the fragment number and the associated text.

- Appendix C, Fragment/Announcement Cross-Reference, is an exhaustive list of all the standard fragments and the numbers of the announcements that use them.

HOW TO USE THIS DOCUMENT

This document describes announcement customization procedures for the DEFINITY AUDIX system. Use this document in conjunction with the DEFINITY AUDIX R1.0 Forms Reference (585-300-207). The forms reference document contains specific instructions for using each form.

CONVENTIONS USED IN THIS DOCUMENT

The following typographic conventions are used in this document

- Information that appears on your terminal screen — including displays, field manes, prompts, and error messages — is shown in constant-width type. Information that you are to type just as it appears in the document is shown in constant-width bold type. Here is an example:

  At the when? prompt type now

  If the system is not yet ready to receive your input, you receive the following error message

  #1:   System is not ready; try again in five minutes.

- Terminal keys that you are to press are shown in boxes. For example, an instructaion to press the return, carriage return or equivalent key might appear m this document as

  Press (RETURN).

- Two or three keys that you are to press at the same time (that is, you are to hold down the first key while pressing the second key and, if appropriate, the third key as well) are enclosed together, separated by hyphens, in a curved-edge box. For example, an instructin to press and hold (ALT) while typing the letter d appears in this document as

  Press (ALT-d).

- Variables for which you or the system substitute a word specific to your own application are shown in all capital letters. For example, a variable to determine the calling party's extension appears in a system announcement as EXTENSION.

TRADEMARKS AND SERVICE MARKS

The following trademarked products are mentioned in this document:

- AUDIX™ is a trademark of AT&T.
- DEFINITY® Communications System is a registered trademark of AT&T.
- UNIX® is a registered trademark of UNIX System Laboratories Inc.

AUDIX Helpline Information

The AT&T AUDIX helpline is a centralized telephone information service that provides a fast and convenient way for DEFINITY AUDIX administrators and technicians to report problems and get information about DEFINITY AUDIX capabilities and administration procedures.

Calls to the AUDIX helpline are handled by AT&T personnel using an automated tracking system. You only need to identify yourself, the name of your company, and the product identification number of your DEFINITY AUDIX system to the support representative who answers your call. (Of course, if your company has multiple locations of DEFINITY AUDIX systems, you may need to provide more identifying details to the support representative such as your location or the name of your system.)

Once you have established your identity, your pertinent information (name product identification number, location, configuration, maintenance contract information, recent system trouble history) is displayed on the support representative's screen. The support representative can then answer your questions or help you isolate and solve your problem either by talking you through a particular troubleshooting procedure or by remotely accessing your system and performing the troubleshooting procedure.

AT&T AUDIX HELPLINE

1-800-56-AUDIX (1-800-562-8349)

8am to 5pm Monday through Friday

(HelpIine hours are for the time zone where the call originates.)

WHO SHOULD CALL THE AUDIX HELPLINE

The helpline is intended to provide support for DEFINITY AUDIX administrators and technicians. DEFINITY AUDIX subscribers should not call the helpline directly. Instead subscribers should direct their questions or problems to their DEFINITY AUDIX administrator, who can solve most routine subscriber issues or call the helpline for assistance.

WHAT TO DO BEFORE YOU CALL

Gather all relevant facts prior to calling the helpline. Alarm reporting should include the resource type, location, and fault code found on the DISPLAY ALARMS form. You should also display the Activity Log when reporting a subscriber's problem with his/her mailbox.

WHAT DOES THE HELPLINE COST

Basic helpline service is provided at no extra cost to customers who have warranty or maintenance contracts. The helpline is available to other DEFINITY AUDIX users on a fee-per-call basis.

1• Overview

Announcements are voiced prompts that subscribers hear while using the DEFINITY AUDIX system. Each of these announcements is identified by a number. For instance `a10` is announcement 10. Announcements are made of up one or more fragments.

A fragment is a piece of voice text consisting of a word phrase or sentence. Fragments are also identified by number, but not the same numbers as those associated with announcements. For example, system announcement `a11`, "Previous login incorrect, Please re-enter extension and pound sign," is composed of fragment `f233`, "Previous login incorrect Please re-enter extension," and fragment `f224`, "and pound sign." Announcements determine the number and order of fragments as they will be encountered by the user. An announcement set is a complete group of announcements containing all of the prompts that may be encountered by the user.

Two announcement sets, a standard version and a terse versoion, are available. Both versions are shipped with your system. The terse set of announcements may be optionally used. The terse version contains all of the announcements in the standard version, but individual announcements contain fewer words while conveying the same message. For example, the standard version of announcement a2 is "Partial entry deleted" The terse version is "deleted." If you want to designate terse as the active announcement set use the third page of the SYSTEM-PARAMETERS FEATURES form and change the entry to terse in the Active announcements field.

The standard announcement set is designated as the active announcement set by default. The active designation means that this is the announcement set that will be heard by anyone accessing DEFINITY AUDIX. An announcement set may also be designated as the administrative announcement set. The administrative designation means that this is the announcement set that may be recorded into. The active and administrative versions may or may not point to the same announcement set. If they do point to the same announcement set, then any recorded changes made to the administrative version will also be made automatically to the active version.

Once all of the initial announcement-related tasks have been completed you will be working with filesystems that are related to the administration of DEFINITY AUDIX system announcements. These are the names and the announcement filesystems.

Filesystem	Function
names	Contains all voiced names. These are the names of all subscribers and machines. A backup copy of this filesystem is made weekly if activated on the SYSTEM-PARAMETERS FEATURES form.
announcements	Contains all of the announcement sets in your system.

2. Announcement Customization Scenarios

How you customize announcements depends on the announcement and the global implication of changing its fragments. You can customize announcements in the following ways:

- Re-record a fragment
- Add a fragment
- Eliminate a fragment

These procedures are described individually on the following pages.

Re-recording a Fragment

There are at least two announcements you will most likely want to change when you customize your DEFINITY AUDIX system: the default call answer greeting (the greeting someone hears when they are routed to a subscriber's DEFINITY AUDIX mailbox) and the default voice mail greeting (the greeting a subscriber hears when s/he calls DEFINITY AUDIX directly). However, the procedure for re-recording a fragment is the same for any announcement as described below:

1. Using Appendix A, Standard Announcements, note the number of the announcement you want to change. This appendix lists each announcement by number and the text and number of each fragment contained in the announcement. Then decide which fragment(s) you want to change.

2. Using Appendix C, Fragment/Announcement Cross-reference, verify that the fragment you want to change is used only by announcements you expect to be affected by your changes. Otherwise, you might change another announcement inadvertently.

3. Use the ANNOUNCEMENT form to verify that the announcement you plan to change is actually composed of the fragments you expect. Refer to DEFINITY AUDIX System R1.0 Forms Reference (585-300-207) for a complete description of this form.

4. Use the SYSTEM-PARAMETERS FEATURES form (page 3) to determine if an administrative announcement version is active. You can make recorded changes only to the administrative announcement version. If the active announcement set is standard or terse, and if it is the version you want to change, make a copy of that announcement set and record the changes to the new copy as follows:

    a. Enter add annc-set new-annc-set-name, where new-annc-set-name is the name that you wish to give to the new announcement set.

    b. Enter copy annc-set. Enter the name of the existing announcement set in the From Announcement Set field. Enter the name that you gave to the new announcement set in the To Announcement Set field.

    c. Enter change system-parameters features. Enter the name that you gave to the new announcement set in the Administrative field on page 2 of this form.

When you are sure that the correct copy of the announcement set is designated as the administrative version, proceed to the next step.

5. Use the SUBSCRIBER form to confirm that you have permission to change announcements (you must have a y in the `Announcement control` field).

6. Use your touch-tone phone to login to the DEFINITY AUDIX system.

7. At the activity menu, press (9). (For security purposes, this option is not included in the voiced options you hear.) If you hear "Invalid entry. For help at any time, press star H.", you do not have announcement control permission.

8. When you hear "To record names, press (4). To play names, press (5)," press (1) to change the fragment. (For security purposes, this option is not included in the voiced options you hear, but plays out if you press (✳)(H) for help.)

9. Enter the fragment ID as prompted and then (#). For example, for f287, enter (2)(8)(7)(#).

10. Record the changed fragment when prompted. You can use all the normal voice mail editing capabilities on your touch-tone phone to make sure the new fragment is exactly how you want it to sound.

11. When you are satisfied with the recording, press (#) to approve it.

12. If the active and administrative announcement versions are the same, then both versions now contain the new figment. However, if the administrative version designates a different announcement set than the active version, you will have to specify the administrative version as the active version. Use the SYSTEM-PARAMETERS FEATURES form to designate the modified announcement set as the active version.

Eliminating a Fragment from an Announcement

Some announcements can be modified by simply eliminating an existing fragment from that specific announcement. For example, you could modify the default voice mail greeting *(Welcome to AUDIX For help at any time, press H) to just say *For help at any time, press H. by removing fragment f287 (Welcome to AUDIX) from the list of fragments that compose the announcement (in this case, announcement a815).

1. Using appendix C, note the number of the announcement you want to change.

2. Use the ANNOUNCEMENT form to eliminate the fragment from appearing in the announcement.

    A. Enter the announcement set name in the `Announcement Set` field.

    B. Enter the announcement ID in the `Announcement ID` field, in this case `a815`.

    C. Press (Enter) to display the fragment composition of the announcement. For this example, the fragment composition is f287, f97.

    D. Replace f287 with f0 (f0 replaces f287 with silence) and press (Enter).

    Announcement a815 is now composed of fragments f0 and f97; callers will simply hear *For help at any time, press H.

3. If the active and administrative announcement versions are the same, then both versions now contain the new fragment. However, if the administrative version designates a different announcement set than the active version, you will have to specify the administrative version as the active version. Use the SYSTEM-PARAMETERS FEATURES form to designate the modified announcement set as the active version.

Adding a Fragment to an Announcement

The previous examples dealt with modifications where the fragments being changed were not used by other announcements or where the fragment itself was left intact but was eliminated from just specific announcements. If you need to change the contents of a fragment for some announcements but not others, you will need to substitute an existing fragment or create anew fragment for use by the announcements you want to change and leave the old fragment intact for use by existing announcements that you do not want changed.

For example, announcement a812 and announcement a834 are the only announcements that use fragment f87, This call is experiencing difficulties. If you want to change this fragment for announcement a812 but not announcement a834, you would need to create a new fragment to associate with announcement a812 instead of fragment f87, and you would leave figment f87 and its association with announcement a834 intact.

1. Using Appendix B, note the number of the fragments you want to change. Using Appendix C, verify that the fragments are used only by announcements you expect to be affected by your changes. Use the ANNOUNCEMENT form to verify that the announcement you plan to change is actually composed of the fragments you expect.

2. Use the SYSTEM-PARAMETERS FEATURES form to determine if an administrative announcement version is active. You can record or re-record fragments only in the administrative announcement version. If there is an active announcement version and it is the version you want to change, make sure that it is also specified as the administrative version.

   When you are sure that the correct copy of the announcement set is designated as the administrative version, go to the next step.

3. Use the SUBSCRIBER form to confirm that you have permission to change announcements (you must have a y in the `Announcement Control` field).

4. Use your touch-tone phone to login to the DEFINITY AUDIX system.

5. At the activity menu, press (9). (For security purposes, this option is not included in the voiced options you hear.) If you hear Entry not understood. Try again., you do not have announcement control permission.

6. When you hear To record names, press 4. To play names, press 5, press (1) to change fragments. (For security purposes, this option is not included in the voiced options you hear.)

7. Enter the fragment ID as prompted; in this case enter an unused number such as f4000, for instance, (4)(0)(0)(0)(#).

NOTE	The fragment numbers 4000-4999 have been reserved for customer use. Using other numbers could jeopardize the integrity of your custom fragments and announcements if these numbers are used for new fragments in later versions or updates to DEFINITY AUDIX.

8. Record the figment when prompted. For example, your new fragment might be This call is experiencing difficulties and cannot continue at this time. You can use all the normal voice mail editing capabilities on your touch-tone phone to make sure the new fragment sounds exactly the way you want it to sound.

9. When you are satisfied with the new fragment recording, press (#) to approve it.

10. Use the ANNOUNCEMENT form to add the new fragment in this case f4000, to announcement a812 in place of fragment f87.

    A. Enter announcement set name in the Announcement Set field.

    B. Enter the announcement number, in this case a812, in the Announcement ID field.

    C. Press (Enter) to display the fragments that compose the announcement. Displaying an announcement shows the numbers of the fragments only — not the text. To determine the text for each listed fragment refer to Appendix B, Standard Fragments. For this example, announcement a812, the fragment composition is as follows:

    • 87: This call is experiencing difficulties.

    • 497: To review your message, press star 1.

    D. Rewrite the line to reflect the new composition, in this case 4000,497 and press (Enter).

    Announcement a812 is now composed of the following fragments:

    • 4000: This call is experiencing difficulties and cannot continue at this time.

    • 497: To review your message, press star 1.

    Meanwhile, announcement a834 still uses fragment f87 as before.

11. If the active and administrative announcement versions are the same, then both versions now contain the new fragment. However, if the administrative version designates a different announcement set than the active version, you will have to specify the administrative version as the active version. Use the SYSTEM-PARAMETERS FEATURESform to designate the modified announcement set as the active version.

Alternatively in this example, you could have created a new fragment f4000 with just and cannot continue at this time. to use in addition to fragment f87 instead of replacing it in announcement a812. Either way, be careful if you make changes to announcements and fragments and be sure you have thoroughly researched the global ramifications of changes that you plan to make before you actually make them. Next, test your changes to make sure your modifications are accurate. And finally, when in doubt save the announcement sets before making changes in the fragments. Be sure to write any changes you make into the appropriate appendix in this manual. Doing this will save you both time and confusion later if you make additional modifications.

3. Variables in Announcements

In the DEFINITY AUDIX system, some announcements are variable — in other words, the contents of an announcement may change depending on changing times, dates, and/or subscriber inputs. Within system announcements, variables are always represented by a word or words in all capital letters. For example announcement 110 (a110) is made up of fragment 663 (f663) and `DATE`:

f663 :  Message waiting notification is not active and this message has an expiration date of

`DATE` is the variable and will change according to the appropriate date.

Some announcements may have more than one variable. For instance, `a287` is

f47 :  Call  from
<NAME>
f262 :  received
<TIME>
<DATE>
f86:  extension
<BUTTONS>

`NAME` is the variable identifying the person who called. `TIME` is the variable time DEFINITY AUDIX received the call. `DATE` is the date DEFINITY AUDIX received the call. `BUTTONS` is the variable extension of the person who called.

In addition, some announcements may include different fragments at different times depending on whether or not certain conditions are met by the variable. Look at `a344`, for example. It can state three different messages depending on the value of the variable `NUMBER`

1. If the variable `NUMBER` is equal to 0, the announcement is:

f741:  Private, priority message sent to
```

2. If the variable `NUMBER` is greater than zero and equal to 1, the announcement is:

```
f741 :  Private, priority message sent to <NAME>
f2 :  and <NUMBER>
f602 :  other.
```

3. If the variable NUMBER is greater than zero and greater than 1, the announcement is:

```
f741:   Private, priority message sent to <NAME>
f2 :  and
<NUMBER>
f217 :   others.

Occasionally, you will see some announcements that call in other announcements in addition to the fragments they use. For example, many announcements call in a873, an announcement that determines the length of a message. This value is used in many announcement scenarios. However, rather than including this involved routine in every announcement that uses this value, it is written as a separate subroutine in a separate announcement. Then the announcements that use this value just call in a873 to determine message length — a process that actually saves a lot of system space.
