1. Purpose

This Practice (BR) is a consolidation of the data in three BRs that were discontinued in 1998:

- BR 751-100-115, COMMON LANGUAGE® Interexchange Access Customer (IAC) Codes
- BR 751-100-110, COMMON LANGUAGE® Exchange Carrier Names
- BR 751-100-175, COMMON LANGUAGE® Bellcore and Regional Holding Company Codes.

It is important to note that the three code sets continue to remain separate and different from each other. The intent of this document is to put all codes that represent company names in one place for ease of use by the user.

This BR contains the standard codes for the representation of Incumbent Local Exchange Carriers, Competitive Local Exchange Carriers, Interexchange Carriers, Resellers, Wireless Services Providers, Enhanced Service Providers, Telecommunications Billing and/or Processing Companies, Competitive Access Providers, Regional Holding Companies and any other type of company that is part of the telecommunications industry.

2. Scope

The codes in this BR are used by the following types of organizations: Network Distribution, Switching Operations, Financial/Comptrollers and Regulatory/ External Affairs. They are particularly applicable to the following operations: Ordering, Circuit Provisioning, Billing and Bill Verification.

Two important uses of these codes are interfacing between companies and achieving flow-through. These codes serve as a trigger to get an order moving through the process in most companies.

3. Reason for Issue

This BR is issued to combine the company name code sets into one place and to reflect all standard codes in all categories that have been assigned up to the publication of this document.

4. General

Direct questions concerning this Practice to the General Codes Code Set Subject Matter Expert, Language Standards Department, Telcordia.

The Telcordia Language Standards Department provides the technical expertise to maintain the General Codes Code Set of which these codes are a part. The COMMON LANGUAGE Technical Advisory Group (TAG) contributes to this process in accordance with the procedures outlined in BR 751-000-102, COMMON LANGUAGE® Code Set Request Procedures.

5. IAC Codes

IAC formerly stood for Interexchange Access Customer. As changes have occurred in the telecommunications industry, the words “Interexchange” and “Access” became confusing to users of these codes. The COMMON LANGUAGE Technical Advisory Group recognized this dilemma and made the decision to refer to these codes as IAC codes.

An IAC is a telecommunications or information provider who may be classified as any of the functional entities listed in the Purpose section above.

IAC codes are assigned to these companies by Telcordia as the maintenance agent for ANSI T1.251. The attempt is made to make the codes mnemonic when such a code is available and not already assigned. The code is made up of three alphabetic characters.

One code per company is assigned. Separate codes are not assigned for different functions of a company. If it is necessary to define a function of a company, it is done in other ways, e.g., with the use of Field Identifiers on a Service Order.

(A given company may be assigned one IAC code as well as one Exchange Carrier Name code. The requirement for which code is needed is determined by the companies with whom the company does business, i.e., some companies require a three-character code for their processes and some companies require a four-character code.)

When mergers, acquisitions or buyouts occur, the Telcordia COMMON LANGUAGE General Codes Chairperson should be informed so that the code(s) will reflect the way the “new” company is doing business. Telcordia works with each company to determine the best way for the change in structure to be represented, i.e., name change on existing code, referencing several existing codes to now use one overall code etc.

The codes are used by work groups with functions listed in the Scope section above.

Codes that begin with the letter Z are for local assignment and use. (There are a few exceptions to this rule as five Z codes have been assigned over the years as standard codes.) A company may have internal reasons for wanting to track various items through their processes and these codes can be the vehicle. There may also be reason during a trial or test of a new system or service to use these codes. They could also be used locally for other functions. Each company assigns their own Z codes if they have a need. They keep track of the meaning of the codes within their company. THESE CODES ARE NOT TO BE USED TO INTERFACE WITH OTHER COMPANIES.

IAC codes are listed in Tables A and B of this Practice. Table A is in company name order; Table B is in IAC code order.

6. Exchange Carrier Name Codes

An Exchange Carrier is a telecommunications entity that provides dial tone and local exchange switching of telecommunications services and has at least one wire center. Resellers of local exchange service are considered to be Exchange Carriers for coding purposes even though they are not the network provider. The codes are required for these companies to do business with the companies from whom they buy (or lease) numbers, dial tone, facilities, etc.

Exchange Carrier Name codes are assigned to these companies by Telcordia as the maintenance agent for ANSI T1.251. The attempt is made to make the codes mnemonic when such a code is available and not already assigned. The code is made up of four alphabetic characters. There are some two-character codes that are standard. These codes belonged to the former Bell System companies and at divestiture of the Bell System the judge allowed the companies to keep those codes to prevent having to change every record in every database. No other two-character codes were ever assigned and none ever will be.

One code per company is assigned. Separate codes are not assigned for different functions of a company. If it is necessary to define a function of a company, it is done in other ways, e.g., with the use of Field Identifiers on a Service Order.

(A given company may be assigned one Exchange Carrier Name code as well as one IAC code. The requirement for which code is needed is determined by the companies with whom the company does business i.e., some companies require a three-character code for their processes and some companies require a four-character code.)

When mergers, acquisitions or buyouts occur, the Telcordia COMMON LANGUAGE General Codes Chairperson should be informed so that the code(s) will reflect the way the “new” company is doing business. Telcordia works with each company to determine the best way for the change in structure to be represented i.e., name change on existing code, referencing several existing codes to now use one overall code etc.

The codes are used by work groups with functions listed in the Scope section above.

Exchange Carrier Name codes are listed in Tables C and D of this Practice. Table C is in company name order; Table D is in Exchange Carrier Name code order. The numeric column on Tables C and D contains the NECA (National Exchange Carrier Association) Company Code assigned to these companies by NECA as maintenance agent for ANSI T1.251. These codes are provided in this document as an aid to the user. NECA is the source of expertise on the numeric codes.

7. Company Codes - Telcordia and Regional Holding Companies

The company codes for Telcordia and the seven Regional Holding Companies were assigned at divestiture of the Bell System. The codes were kept separate from the Exchange Carrier Name codes because these companies are holding companies of Exchange Carriers. A Regional Holding Company is one of seven business entities that were formed as a result of the breakup of the Bell System.

These codes were assigned in 1984 and have not changed. No other codes will be added to this section.

The code is made up of two alphabetic characters.

Company Codes for Telcordia and the Regional Holding Companies are listed in Table E of this Practice.
